YARS volume 15(26): “The Way Forward for Digital Europe: Antitrust vs. Regulation”

The YARS volume 15(26) will focus on the interface between competition law and sector regulation in Europe. This long-debated issue has become fashionable once again in view of the challenges posed by the application of competition law notions and remedies to digital markets. Both at the European level and at the national level, the role of sector regulation is growing in importance, with an unprecedented effect on the competitive dynamics of those markets.

YARS 15(26) also seeks to address the influence of national competition authorities on the development of EU competition policy. Indeed, national competition authorities have recently adopted a number of crucial decisions that may have a major impact on competition law enforcement at the EU level.

Contributions addressing the two topics above are particularly welcome for the YARS 2022, vol. 15(26), but the volume is also open to other issues related to competition law and sector regulation. YARS volume 15(26) will be co-edited by Amedeo Arena and Laura Zoboli.
